Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, invites nominations and applications for the position of Director for its Institute for Women’s Leadership (IWL). This position, reporting to the Executive Vice President for Academic Affairs, offers an individual committed to advancing the status of women within and outside the University a highly visible platform from which to foster programs and initiatives that further scholarship, education, policy, and practice with respect to diversity, feminism, and women’s leadership.

The Institute for Women’s Leadership (http://iwl.rutgers.edu) is a consortium of eight units based at the Rutgers-New Brunswick campus (http://iwl.rutgers.edu) and dedicated to the study of women and gender, to advocacy on behalf of gender equity, and to the promotion of women’s leadership locally, nationally, and globally. Established in 1991, the Institute for Women’s Leadership connects its member units in the mission to examine and advance women’s leadership in education, research, the arts, sciences, business, politics and government, human rights, the workplace, and the world. The Institute supports the missions of its member units, promotes a collective focus on women’s leadership for social change, and leads in the creation of initiatives that further women’s leadership in all arenas.

Qualifications
The Director will be a visionary leader who can build on IWL’s previous and current accomplishments to build an agenda for the next decade. The successful candidate will possess a Ph.D. or other terminal degree in an academic or professional field and will be a scholar of national reputation, or will have had equivalent professional leadership experience in areas related to issues of significance to women. High level experience representing and advocating for women’s issues in public settings is highly desirable.
