“Travel, for those with their eyes and ears open, is a great university on the go. The classes and lectures are in the world’s museums, galleries, cathedrals, and great buildings. They are also held in all the deep forests, alpine meadows, great deserts, and sweeping shorelines of this planet. Best of all, you are your own professor.”

Lewis N. Clark.

“Travel is one of the most rewarding forms of introspection.” Lawrence Durrell.

“A day of travel will bring a basketful of learning.” Vietnamese proverb.

“All tourists are dear to Hermes, the god of travel, who is patron of aimiable curiosity and freedom of mind. There is wisdom in turning as often as possible from the familiar to the unfamiliar: it keeps the mind agile, it kills prejudice, and it fosters humor.”

Santayana.

“Tourism is the perfect tool to build a just and prosperous society because it can not only create jobs needed to absorb Indonesia’s abundant human resources but also instill new pride in Indonesian culture and spirituality.” President Muhammad Suharto.

“Tourism is important for Israel and its neighbors and for the enhancement of peace. I can’t think of a better package than a trip to Israel and Jordan” Prime Minister Netanyahu.

“I have always believed that as we get to know one another, we come to realize that those things that bring us together are far greater than those which separate us. Travel and tourism gives us the chance to make friends from cultures different from ours and from countries distant from our own.” King Hussein of Jordan.

“He that would bring home the wealth of the Indies must carry the wealth of the Indies with him. So it is in traveling a man must carry knowledge with him if he would bring knowledge home.” Inscription on façade of Union Station, Washington D.C.

This course explores the growth and impacts of tourism both domestically and internationally. Until 9/11 tourism was among the largest and fastest growing industries globally, though the industry is recovering from terrorist attacks, from the tsunami in Asia in December 2004, and from economic rollercoasters. Cities and regions in the U.S. and Europe, as well as many developing countries, are increasingly turning to tourism as a route to economic growth. Tourism has obvious economic, social and political benefits earning, as it does, precious foreign exchange and international contacts. Travel can be enlightening and entertaining. But international tourism in particular, also has costs, especially for the destination country. The diversion of scarce resources towards luxury accommodations, the commercialization of local cultures, environmental degradation, and the growth of a “servile” class, are frequent corollaries of tourism in developing countries. This course will encourage you to travel in your mind and perhaps foster some of the qualities which Santayana attributes to travel. We will pay particular attention to questions of social justice and ethics concerning the tourist industry.

Reading

Due to the mix of students, the rapid obsolescence of work in this field, the cost of books, and the huge availability of new material, there is no text book for this class. Instead there are reading suggestions from recent E-Journals listed for each week (in italics) and suggestions for relevant books, most of which are in the library. To access electronic journals go to the Rutgers Library webpage and click on electronic journals, then to the letter of the first name in the title of the journal. I recommend Google Scholar site as a research tool. Planning graduate students might want to buy such books as L. Hoffman, S. Fainstein and D. Judd.(eds) Cities and Visitors: Regulating People, Markets, and City Space (Blackwell, 2003); D.Judd The Infrastructure of Play: Building the Tourist City (M.E. Sharpe, 2003) or D. Judd and S. Fainstein The Tourist City (Yale, 1999). Geographers might consider D. Crouch Leisure/tourism geographies: practices and geographical knowledge (Routledge 1999) or G. Shaw and A. Williams Critical Issues in Geography: A Geographical Perspective (Blackwell 2002) or C.M.Hall and S. Page The Geography of tourism and recreation: environment, space and place (3rd edition 2006) or A. Lew, CM Hall and A. Williams A Companion Guide to Tourism (2004). Undergraduates may want to buy William Theobald Global Tourism (Elsevier 2005).

The literature on tourism is growing rapidly and the Rutgers libraries have a reasonable collection of material on this topic, and useful material will be found on electronic journals. The library has electronic versions of Tourism Geographies, The Annals of Tourism Research, The International Journal of Tourism Research, Tourism Management, Tourism and Hospitality Research, Journal of Sustainable Tourism, Journal of Vacation Marketing, and Journal of Travel Medicine. It also has Travel Weekly, Travel Agent, Journal of Sport Tourism as well as Travel Trade, Business World Travel etc. Another new E-journal – Review of Tourism Research is on the web at <http://ertr.tamu.edu>. Browse through these for relevant material. The syllabus lists suggested reading for each topic. There is, of course, a large amount of material related to tourism on the Web, but remember that most of this is intended for tourism “consumers” rather than “analysts,” although we will analyze some of it. Please keep an eye out for tourism-related news items in newspapers, magazines etc. and bring them to class for “show and tell.”

Note that although there is no common assigned reading, I expect everyone to read something relevant to the topic each week and will intermittently ask you to summarize (either verbally, or in writing) what you have read.

Requirements and Assignments

Attendance and participation in class discussion is expected.

Undergraduate requirements:

- | | |
|--|--------------------|
| 1. WWW assignment. Due Feb. 11 | 5% of course grade |
| 2. Travel book essay. About 5pp. Due Feb 18 | 20% |

Graduate Requirements:

1. WWW assignment Due Feb 11 5%
1. Travel book essay. About 5pp. Due Feb 18 15%
2. Class presentations and discussion 20%
3. Research paper, About 20 pp. Due May 5 & presentation. 60%

Academic Integrity

All students are expected to know, understand and live up to the standards of academic integrity explained at <http://teachx.rutgers.edu/integrity/>. If you have any question about these, ask me. Any paper containing plagiarism will receive a failing grade. I reserve the right to require you submit papers electronically for turnitin.com.

Travel Book Assignment (all students)

Choose a “travel book” which you have not previously read. This may be an historical account by a traveler (see Alexander Library for many shelves of such books), or try Frances Trollope Domestic manners of the Americans, Charles Dickens Pictures from Italy, Charles Darwin Voyage of the Beagle, Robert Louis Stevenson Travels with a donkey in the Cevennes, Henry James Italian Hours, D.H. Lawrence Sea and Sardinia, Evelyn Waugh A Mediterranean Journal, Freya Stark The Valley of the Assassins, Paul Bowles The Sheltering Sky.) It can also be fiction, such as Graham Greene Journey Without Maps or Travels with my Aunt, Maryse Conde Tree of Life or Lawrence Durrell Sicilian Carousel. Other possibilities are Paul Theroux The Great Railway Bazaar or Dark Star Safari, V.S. Naipal An Area of Darkness, Jan Morris Places or Journeys, Caroline Alexander Mrs Chippy’s Last Expedition: The Remarkable Journey of Shackleton’s Polar-Bound Cat, Michael Paterniti Driving Mr. Albert: A Trip across America with Einstein’s Brain Claude Levi Strauss Tristes Tropiques or a book about a particular kind of traveler such as women (Sonia Melchett Passionate Quest) or gays (Edmund White States of Desire). Alternatively, you can read a novel about a tourist destination: e.g. Jamaica Kincaid The Small Place (about Antigua), Mary Lee Settle Blood Tie (about Turkey), Julian Barnes England England (about the Isle of Wight as theme park), or Alison Lurie The Last Resort (about Key West). If you read another language well enough, feel free to read a book in that language (but I’m afraid I can only read your assignment in English!). Another possibility is to read one of the travel anthologies – e.g. Paul Fussel (ed) The Norton Book of Travel, or Bill Buford (ed) In Trouble Again: A Special Issue [of Granta] on Travel Writing or Paul Theroux The Best American Travel Writing. Recent books I’ve enjoyed is Rebecca Solnit’s Wanderlust: A History of Walking and Tony Horwitz Blue Latitudes: Boldly going where Captain Cook has gone before. Books recently seen in Borders include Elliot Hester Adventures of a Continental Drifter, Alice Steinbach Without Reservations: The travels of an independent woman, Holly Morris Adventure Divas: Searching the globe for a new kind of heroine and Robert Young Pelton Three Worlds Gone Mad: Dangerous journeys through war zones of Africa, Asia and South Pacific. Eric Weiner The Geography of Bliss. When you have read your chosen book, write a short essay (defined in a dictionary as a “short literary composition dealing with a single subject, usually from a personal point of view, without attempting completeness”) about an aspect of the book that has to do with travel/tourism. For example, what does the author convey about the value of travel? How does travel change the people in the book? How do travelers “understand” the people they meet and make sense of places? What motives do the characters have for traveling? How do travelers vs. local peoples’ perspectives differ? You need not restrict yourself to these questions. The main idea is to enjoy the book and reflect on its ideas. Graduate students may want to look at James Duncan and Derek Gregory Writes of Passage: Reading Travel Writing Routledge, 1999, which provides some theoretical and analytic background to reading this kind of literature. Amanda Gilroy’s Romantic Geographies: discourses of travel 1775-1844 and Hans Christian Anderson [sic!] and Mike Robinson (eds) Literature and Tourism: Reading and Writing Tourism Texts (2002) or Michael Shapiro A Sense of Place: Great travel writers talk about their craft, lives and inspiration (2004) might give you helpful ideas too. Length about 5 pp. Due Feb. 18. Nota Bene: This is an ESSAY, not a book review. It shouldn’t summarize and critique the book but should meditate on themes about travel arising from reading the book.

Controversy Assignment (undergraduates)

We will be exploring a number of controversies in this course. For this paper, select one of these and make the argument either for or against a position. Possible options you could support or oppose are given below, but I encourage you to come up with your own controversy. You can check with me in advance for suitability if you wish. In your paper, provide examples of places, programs and policies where possible. You must include at least two citations from each of a) books b) journals, and c) WWW. Government Docs are also possible sources and, of course, newspapers.

1. Tourism is an appropriate route to economic growth in most developing countries.
2. Yellowstone National Park should ban all snowmobiles.
3. Disney theme parks promote global cultural homogeneity.
4. Enclave resorts in the Caribbean are preferable from both residents’ and tourists’ viewpoints.
5. Leisure travel by jet plane should be very heavily taxed to reduce carbon emissions.
6. New Jersey should protect its beaches from erosion at all cost because they are the staple tourist attraction.
7. Declining industrial cities should invest in art galleries to attract visitors.
8. Prostitution should be legalized in sex tourist destinations so it can be regulated.
9. The U.S. should remove its travel ban on Americans to Cuba.
10. New Orleans should be rebuilt primarily for tourists.

Length: 5-10 pp. Due March 4

Planning for Tourism in a Place Assignment (undergraduates)

Select a place and write a short paper discussing planning issues related to tourism in that location. The place may be a country (e.g. Jamaica, South Africa), a state (Vermont, Utah), a city (Newark, Paris), a park (Grand Canyon, Adirondack, Masai Mara), a continent (Antarctica), or a neighborhood (Harlem, The Castro). Obviously, the planning issues you address will depend partly on the scale of the place you choose. You can focus mainly on environmental, economic, or social planning as appropriate, but the place and issues must be different from the ones you used for the previous (controversy) assignment. Cite sources and use illustrations where possible. Length 7-10pp. Due May 6 or before. Consider doing this assignment with a partner or small group and selecting a place which is accessible for you to do some field work. In this case the paper would be longer and you would get one grade for the project (unless the input has been very different for group members).

Research Paper (Graduate Students only)

The main requirement for grad. students is to write a research paper on a topic of your choice related to tourism planning or geography. A brief (one page or less) proposal of what you intend to write on, and what sources you have found to date, is due on Feb 4 and I will schedule times to meet individually with you the following week so I can give you feedback. The final paper is due May 5th. Length should be around twenty pages. You will present your paper to the class at the end of the semester. Seeking inspiration: see Tourism research methods: integrating theory with practice by B. Ritchie, P. Burns, and C. Palmer (2005) or The Critical Turn in Tourism Studies: Innovative Research Methodologies eds Irena Ateljevic, Nigel Morgan and Annette Pritchard (Elsevier, 2007).

Class presentation and leading discussion (Graduate Students and Undergraduate Volunteers)

To stimulate class participation and to reduce the tedium of listening to me for three hours, I would like each graduate student to select a week (when that topic particularly interests you) to make a brief presentation (powerpoint would be good, but not required) preferably on a controversy related to the topic, and lead a debate/discussion. Try to make your presentation as interactive as possible. Think of questions to ask the class and make provocative statements. Try playing “devil’s advocate.” You might use case studies with which you are familiar. Undergraduates may volunteer to do this (with a partner or small group if you like) for extra credit, but are not required to do so.
